SENTENCE IN LETTER PENNELL WROTE TO MRS. BURDICK.

she Will Be a Witness on Monday and This Letter, Written Months Ago, May District Attorney Denies That He Has the Letter-Pennell's Hatred of Burtick Well Known to the Authorities The Police, However, Not Content to Dump the Murder on Pennell.

B FFALO, March 18 .- A recess of five days has been taken in the Burdick inquest. Police Justice Murphy announced this morning that District Attorney Coatsworth had lost his voice and that an adjournment until next Monday afternoon was necessary. The District Attorney's throat is badly affected by his rapid questioning of witnesses, and although he was at his office to-day he could hardly whisper. Mr. Coatsworth hopes to finish the inquest on Monday, but he is not certain that another day will not be needed. First he will call Mrs. Burdick, the widow of the murdered man. While she is on the stand a sensational letter will probably be shown to her for identification and explanation. It was written to her months ago by Arthur R. Pennell, who was then in New York. In this etter Pennell, referring to Burdick, wrote:

"I feel that I must kill him." The District Attorney denied to-day that the letter was in his possession. The friends of Burdick insist, however, that the letter will be produced as soon as Mrs. Burdick is called to the witness stand. They are certain that it is authentic and do not believe that the widow will deny having received it. Pennell's hatred of Burdick was well known to the authorities. The details of the strained, even hostile, relations between the two men now dead were gathered immediately after the murder of Burdick and before the death of Pennell. When the police called on Pennell he said frankly that the relations between him and Burdick "strained, very strained." They learned, too, of the angry words that passed between Burdick and Pennell when they met in an office one day. Burdick had told his partner, Mr. Parke, of his meeting Pennell. Pennell's talks about Burdick after the murder were not confined to the police. Four days before he and his wife were dashed into the quarry at Kensington he told a reporter for THE SUN of his intention to make a statement about Burdick.

"Some may say it comes with ill grace to abuse a dead man," said Pennell," but when the time comes for me to make a statement in defence of myself from what some newspapers are printing about me I intend to let people know just what kind of a man Burdick was. It's pretty hard to sit still and see them making him out a saint and painting a lot of others black. I did not like him and he did not like me, and we both knew it, and I told the police frankly we were not on good terms and that our relations were strained.. That we were not friendly is a reason why his death, oming at this time, was one of the worst coming at this time, was one of the worst things that could happen to me."

Then Pennell turned to what agitated him more than anything else, the possi-

him more than anything else, the possi-bility that the newspapers would go into details of his meetings with Mrs. Burdick and of his having seen her within a few days of the murder. Every day between the death of Burdick and his own death Pennell had his mind on his intended state-ment. He even told about it to the barber who shaved him on the morning before his death. Pennell's dislike of Burdick dead was as apparent as his dislike of Bur-dick living, but he never intimated to the police or the reporters that he hated him enough to kill him. Once he said that dragging in Mrs. Burdick's name was enough to drive him crazy.

he named Pennell as correspondent. The manner in which this letter was discovered has not been made clear. Some say it was found in the Burdick house, others that it was in Burdick's office. The fact was round in the Burdick house, others that it was in Burdick's office. The fact remains that Mr. Burdick before his death obtained possession of certain letters and papers of Mrs. Burdick.

Some of Burdick's friends insist that al-though Burdick did not keep all his papers at his home, the person who murdered him thought he had some desired letters or the table in the den, hoping to obtain the the table in the den, hoping to obtain the letters or papers. If so, the murderer failed to steal from Burdick's coat some letters from the father of Mrs. Warren of Cleveland, the woman referred to yesterday by Mrs. Paine as Burdick's "little frie d." All this talk is like the testimony of Charles S. Parks—intended to involve Pennell. The realize we not content to dump the The police are not content to dump the Burdick murder on Pennell and say That job's done. They must have some proof before a dead man is branded as a murderer, or even is accepted as a part solution of the mystery.

If Pennell got into the Burdick house through the kitchen window, as Mr. Parke suggested at the inquest yesterday, who unlocked the window on the inside? The other window was found locked, and Katte Koenig, the second girl, says both windows were tocked when she went to bed. If Pennell got in by the front door, who let him in? Was it Burdick, ciad only in an undershirt? If Burdick was asleep or tring in the den when the murderer en-tered by the front door who opened the door to let the murderer in? If the murderer had a key, who gave the key to him? Parke suggested yesterday that Pennell had a key. The autopey has shown that the partly caten lunch on the table was not the partly caten lunch on the table was not touched by Burelick Did the murderer of part of r, with six other persons in the house? These and other questions embody problems that the police say must be solved robiers that the police say must be solved if the accusation is to be maintained that Pennell did the marker without an accomplice. The "hired assessin" included in arise's accusation meets little consideration from the police. They finish a hired examin would have alone a quick job and ad without waiting for touch or stopping to wrap up the bady of his victim. murder had been committed the slayer did not use the electric push button, as was the custom in the house, but reached to the fixture and turned the stop, thus extinguishing the light.

"The electric push button has two purposes—one to ignite a spark and the other to shoot out of the jet a flame of gas. A cap covers the jet of the chandelier that is used in connection with the electric appliance. The gas is always turned half way on, but the cap prevents it from escaping. When the murderer left the Burdick house on the night of the murder, he or she turned off this light by using the key of the chandelier. The family are certain that an outsider committed the crime.

Mr. Hartzell does not seem to join in Mr. Parke's suspicion of Arthur R. Penneil, for Parke said that Pennell had "the run of the house," while Hartzell would have it thought that the criminal was a stranger to the Pennell's will may be offered for probate to-morrow. It leaves nothing to Mrs.

Burdick, despite rumors to the contrary.

ANOTHER TUNNEL TO JERSEY. To Connect With the Pennsylvania Rail-

Plans are being prepared for the con-struction of a tunnel from the Pennsylvania Railroad station at the foot of Exchange place, Jersey City, under the Hudson River to Cortlandt street, and thence under that thoroughfare to Church street, and north under Church street to Fulton

The tunnel will be built by the New York and Jersey Railroad Company, which is boring a trolley tunnel under the Hudson from Fifteenth street to this city. The plans are those of William G. McAdoo, president of the company.

The evidence of the tunnel people's activity in this city is found in the purchase of real estate along the proposed route. Among the parcels secured is the southwest corner of Dey and Church streets, which was sold by Jefferson M. Levy.

It is understood that Horace S. Ely & Co., acting for the tunnel people, have also obtained options and contracts on parcels in Church street, and on the south side of Fulton, from Greenwich to Church street. The money spent thus far is said to be about

The money spent thus far is said to be about $1,000,000.

President Edward F. C. Young of the First National Bank of Jersey City, who is interested in the trolley tunnel enterprise, when asked about the proposed Cortlandt street tunnel scheme, said to a Sun reporter:

"I don't know anything about it. The matter hasn't come before me yet."

The purchase of a building and plot of ground in Exchange place, Jersey City, by the Real Estate Trust Company led to the supposition that the property had been secured for terminal purposes. President Frank Stevens of the company said:

"The property was bought a month ago as a speculation. If we purchased it for a tunnel terminal, of course, I wouldn't say anything about it."

anything about it."

The trolley terminal, which will have an outlet at Fifteenth street, Jersey City, will have a branch running north parallel with the river to Hudson Place, Hoboken, where it will connect with the Jersey City, Hoboken and Paterson Street Railway Company.

Another branch will run south from Fifteenth street, under the Erie and Penn-Fifteenth street, under the Erie and Pennsylvania railroads, to Exchange place, where there will be a terminal and connections with the North Jersey Street Railway Company, which operates the Jersey City trolley lines and runs cars to Newark. It is believed that eventually the tunnel will be extended south from Exchange place to the Jersey Central station at Communical. inunipaw.

Mr. Baldwin said that the general cause of education in the South had made more advance in the last year than in all the years since 1860.

Walter H. Page said that he thought that there was reason to believe that the negro population of the South would concentrate in the lowlands along the coast so that in time the agricultural developin a territory occupied almost exclusively by negroes. The whites would take to the hill country and to manufacturing. Mr. Page said that it was a question whether the educational facilities which were being developed so fast in the South could keep up with the increasing population. There are more illiterate negroes to-day than there were thirtyyears ago, notwithstand-ing all the school work than has been done.

Rightly or wisely or not the negro had been cut out of Southern politics. There was now hope that the Southern white men would be free to divide into two parties would be free to divide into two parties with competing ideals, no longer constrained by the superstition of negro domination. There was no hope for the reincarnation of the genius of Southern politics with its fire and poetry and imagination. The men who represented the South in politics to-day were some of them not representative and some of them unworthy.

The Rev Pitt Dillingham said that his rescription in Alabama convictors in that

He is also making preparations to entertain the Court for two weeks or a month at Pao ting fu, and has built a palace there for the reception of the royal

The people bitterly condemn the taxes that are levied on them for such purposes as this. Notwithstanding the announcement by the Throne that the construction of a railway to connect the tombs with the Lu Han line was for the purpose of reducing the cost of these pilgrimages, the expenditures have been multiplied. The best officials complain bitterly of the excessive corruption, saying it is impossible to escape blackmail in one form or another. It is believed the Chinese Government has never reached a lower state in this respect. It is the opinion of the best posted foreigners that the Chinese officials are in capable; that they do not intend to turn oreign relief in the matter of the indemnity or of any other advantage toward the recuperation and safeguarding of the State and that the sympathy and help extended o China on this assumption is a mistake.

BERLIN, March 18 .- Mr. Samuel Untermyer of the law firm of Untermyer, Gugenheimer & Marshall of New York, in an interview here to-day upon the case of Whitaker Wright, for whom the firm is acting as counsel, said that, while he had high respect for the administration of law in England, he did not consider that Wright would have a fair trial there owing to excited public feeling over the failure of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, and it was likely that he would be condemned. The Celtic is due here next Wednesday, five days before Wright will be arraigned again. He is ill in Ludlow Street Jail and his counsel made a motion yester day afternoon that he be admitted to bail, saying that unless he could get out of the jail he was likely to develop pneumonia. Wright, it was stated at the jail yesterday and also in an affidavit made by Dr. Wilhelm Levine of 49 East Seventh street, has a bad attack of bronchitis. He had a chill night before last and yesterday he kept to his bed. In addition to the attaci of bronchitis it was also said at the jai that Wright seems to be suffering from nervous collapse and has had only two hours' sleep a night since he was locked up. Wright told the jail people that he had had a similar attack shortly before had had a similar attack shortly before starting for this country.

Wright was to have been arraigned for a hearing before Commissioner Alexander yesterday, but the Commissioner postponed the hearing to March 30 on account of the statements made to him concerning Wright's condition. Louis Marshall of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, after the Commissioner had denied a motion to dismiss the case, made a motion that bail be accepted for Wright on the ground that it had often been done in extradition cases between the States and that it was a gross injustice not to take bail in the case of the citizen of another country locked up on a mere cablegram.

Lawyer Fox, representing the British Consul, said that bail in extradition cases between States might be allowable, but that in Wright's case it was settled by treaty, that treaty was the supreme law and that under it no bail could be allowed.

"I'll say right here," said Mr. Fox, "that when Wright appears for a hearing here we have another complaint to make against him, but we do not care to divulge it until

The Perfect Shoulder. Our "CONCAVE" Shoulder.

You can't get a perfect shoulder by stuffing it out with wadding—simply because wadding is bound to shrink and sag and the shoulder loses its shape.

The breadth and grace of line of our "Concave" shoulder are not due to padding, but from the way it is cut and from the skilful modelling and shaping by hand—the shape of the "Concave" shoulder is built right into it—and it's there to stay as long as the garment lasts.

This perfect shoulder and our "Closefitting" collar are put into all of our spring suits and overcoats. Every man who is looking for an improvement in the fit and style of his clothes should be interested in our showing of
